Logline: When Sofia Martinez's free-spirited father falls into a coma, the 21-year-old musical prodigy must decode his cryptic compositions to wake him—before her pragmatic mother pulls the plug.

Synopsis: Sofia Martinez, a 21-year-old musical prodigy, has stopped playing piano—pushed by her pragmatic mother to choose stability over passion and pursue a high-paying tech job. But when her free-spirited father falls into a mysterious coma—a rare condition that leaves the mind hyperactive while the body lies still—Sofia discovers a cryptic letter he left behind: musical codes pointing to a song he called In The Key of Freedom... a song that might be the key to waking him up.

With the help of an eccentric neuroscientist and a washed-up bluesman, Sofia races to decode her father's mysterious letters before time runs out and her mother pulls the plug. Each clue draws her deeper into a web of music, memory, and faith—until she realizes the only way to save him is to play her father's unfinished song: the one she walked away from years ago, and the one that holds the secret to setting them both free.

Why this movie should be made:

This story explores the transformative power of music and the lengths we'll go to for family—proving that sometimes, to save the ones we love, we must first awaken ourselves.

Andrew Charles Southern
